Stolen Church . . .

Editor's Note:

Two Carmelites returned from a vacation in the Canadian Rockies Saturday bringing back plunder in the form of a snap shot and piquant bit of local history. Since Banff, Lake Louise and Jasper are favorite vacation spots for Carmelites and the tiny picturesque community of Windermere is on one of the routes over which a good many Carmelites will travel to the Canadian Parks this summer, we pass on the picture and the story of Windemere's stolen church.

STORY OF THE STOLEN CHURCH

(Extract from Tales of the Kootenays by Fred J. Smyth)

We have read of men stealing all kinds of things from little apples to crown jewels; of all kinds of highwaymen and footpads, but this is probably the first and only case in history of a man stealing a church—an entire church, even to the Bible, books and bell. And this is how it happened.

When the Canadian Pacific Railway had been completed through the Selkirk Mountains the little town of Donald was to it what Revelstoke is now—its mountain divisional headquarters. When in 1887 it first donned this dignity it became also government, business, social and religious center for all British Columbia interior east of Kamloops. By 1887, Rev. Henry Irwin (lovably called Father Pat all over B. C. for his racial wit and spiritual energy) the Anglican Main line missionary, had secured the erection at Donald, of the very first church of any denomination in this hitherto churchless wilderness.

When the good Baroness Burdett-Coutts sent it a beautiful 600 pound silver-toned bell, when the Theological College, Lichfield, England, sent it a beautifully bound Bible, and when Bishop Sillitoe of the Diocese of New Westminster, consecrated it on February 24th, 1889, Donald, by the envious, was considered to have attained a state of grace of which it should be justly proud. Revelstoke was particularly jealous, for there the Anglicans were sharing turn-about the use for services of the improvised first little school house.

Came a day then, just ten years later, when location, utility and

Mass Meeting Held To Protest Re-Zoning Action

An organized protest will be presented to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors on the matter of rezoning for commercial use the section at the Carmel Valley turnoff of Highway 1, following last Monday night's mass meeting at Sunset Auditorium. More than 300 persons attended to voice their opinions on the proposed action.

At the last meeting of the Monterey County Planning Commission, the rezoning was approved despite opposition by Carmel Unincorporated, residents near the vicinity and representatives of the Carmel Business Association.

Gunnar Norberg acted as chairman at Monday night's meeting and protests against the action were voiced by Stanley Pedder, Capt. Archer M. R. Allen, Gen. E. G. Chapman, president of Carmel Unincorporated, Fred Farr, Miss Orre Hazeltine, Mrs. Helen Clark Cranston, president of the Carmel Woman's Club, and Corum Jackson.

Those opposing the action have been advised by District Attorney Anthony Brazil that there is no legal reason why the property cannot be rezoned back for residential or agricultural use.

A new note, adding to the general confusion, was a suggestion that the "island" be converted into a war memorial.

Petitions have been circulated protesting the rezoning and they will be presented to the Board of Supervisors. The July 1 meeting is set for 1:00 o'clock at the Salinas courthouse.

Judges Announce Winners Of Our Poetry Contest

The response to our recent poetry contest was greater than in former years and more widespread. One hundred and seventy-two entries came in from all over the country. However, the quality of the work was notably inferior and the judges had difficulty in finding three poems worthy of first, second and third prizes.

Mrs. Robinson Jeffers and Mr. and Mrs. John Wilgress kindly consented to act as judges and it is to their careful consideration that we owe the results of the contest. The three winning poems will be found in the Poetry column of this issue. Those obtaining honorable mention will be printed next week and selections will be made from some of the others for publication later on.

After struggling with the pile of manuscripts for some time one of the judges remarked: "Why do they not write simply and about things they know, instead of attempting so much that is beyond their reach?" This is a familiar fault of minor poetry. Writers are seldom content with what is around them as material for their verse, and yet it is just that sudden flash of insight revealing the essence through the well-known form that makes real poetry. In writing for a contest there is often too much striving and too little spontaneous expression.

Most of the poems were in rhyme and in the well-known forms. There was little free verse and most of what there was disregarded the importance of inner form. Many poems contained fine lines in the midst of ordinary and often trite expressions, and several poems were almost prize-worthy except for lines which could easily

Stanton Pleads Not Guilty; Asks For Jury Trial

Robert Stanton, Jr., cited for alleged violations of the multiple dwelling ordinance, was arraigned in Judge George P. Ross' city court on Tuesday and he pleaded not guilty to the charges and asked for a jury trial. The trial has been set for July 6 and will take place at 2 p. m. on that date in the council chambers.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown, cited for the same violations, will appear in the Superior Court in Salinas next Monday, following the filing of the injunction against them by Acting City Attorney Charles Barrett.

Barrett told The Pine Cone yesterday that there have been "gratifyingly few" violators of the multiple dwelling ordinance, but that there are a number of other violators of the multiple kitchen ordinance. This ordinance prohibits more than one kitchen to one building site. According to the city ordinance, this violation constitutes a hazard against health and sanitary conditions in the city as well as being an extreme fire hazard.

There are many known violators of this latter measure, Barrett states, and some of them will receive citations within the next few days.

Citizens' Meeting Today To Study High Sewer Costs

A meeting for the purpose of discussing the heavy assessments for installation of a sewage system by the Carmel Sanitary District along the lower side of San Antonio and the Carmel Point areas will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of John F. Todd, on Carmelo between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. Residents affected by the action will be in attendance.

The meeting scheduled for today is the result of the assessment notices received in the mail a week ago Wednesday by home owners in the district which stated that bids for sewage installation were being called for and that the cost would be in the neighborhood of $194,000.

Property owners were shocked at the amounts they would be forced to pay and one in particular, Robinson Jeffers, who owns considerable land on the Point, would be assessed about $12,000.

Several property owners have expressed the opinion that the present sewage system is already overloaded. They believe the inclusion of additional areas should be delayed until the new disposal plant is in operation, and, further, a delay of a year or so might bring a decrease in the cost of the project.

The board of directors adopted the resolution for the work, since it has sole power to initiate proceedings. No petition was circulated on the matter.

Part of the discussion at this afternoon's meeting will be as to whether the project has been as economically worked out as might be.

Meanwhile, a legal notice has been printed calling for sealed bids. A meeting on the matter has been set for July 11 at 7:30 p. m. in the council chambers. At that time written protests will be read. Proceedings must be dropped for a year if a majority of the property owners object.

Brothers under the skin, these Taosenos

They have had a wonderful fight in Taos, New Mexico. It is the sort of battle, given the same issue, that would have happened in Carmel, in pretty much the same manner and with the same outcome. Aside from its amusing aspects it offers a heartening reminder that elsewhere there are people who care enough about the abstract values to fight for them, and that it is possible for citizens to win such engagements.

We quote from the last issue of the Taos Star.

"There won't be any parking meters in Taos.

"Village councilmen voted unanimously to kill the oft-discussed proposal Monday night.

"Spoiling for a fight, 150 residents and vistors sat in the second-floor district courtroom for more than an hour while Mayor Pascual Martinez conducted an executive session down below.

"Behind a locked door, the council decided installation of meters carried too many 'risks,' that vandalism could rob the village of all profits, and that while it might be possible to insure the meters against damage, cost of insurance would be high.

"Mayor Martinez told the councilmen at this juncture that their vote for meters would be 'killing the goose to get at the eggs.'

"After councilmen climbed the courthouse stairs and greeted the large throng of 'down-with-the-meters' citizens, Floyd Santistevan immediately made a motion to kill the project.

"William Santistevan, Philip Cantu and Murl Packard joined in the vote that put an end to one of Taos' bitterest municipal controversies.

"The same councilmen had voted approximately a month ago to buy $18,000 worth of the nickel-grabbing sentinels and set them up around centuries-old Taos plaza and on other village streets.

A citizens' mass meeting a week later resulted in Packard's decision to change his vote and a second mass meeting left the situation still stalemated, with Mayor Martinez finding several reasons for not signing the purchase contract.

"Last week's activity on the

ADULT RECREATION SOFTBALL LEAGUE OPENS TONIGHT

Tonight, at 7:15, the opening gun in the 1949 Adult Summer league will be fired, when the always potent Lions Club tangles with the Carmel Firefighters. Cliff Cook, Lions mentor, has banded together the usual assortment of honorary clubmen, and, 'tis rumored, he has lured Chuck Dawson into the fold. With Dawson and Paul Clemens as a pitching staff, the Lions can readily be placed in the favorites spot. Kenny Roberts and his hosemen boast a wealth of sagacious performers with many years of softball behind them. Kenny and Gene Ricketts will handle the pitching assignments for the Firemen.

Second tilt, finds the Wilder & Jones Workers squaring off against the combined Carmel and Monterey police forces. Chief Fraties rates his chiropodist patronizers as potential league champions this season and many canny softball observers are deigned to agree with him. With Dufur and Hawkins serving them up, enemy batters are liable to be handcuffed. The men who toil at the W&J shop will comprise their Adult League entry. None of their Bay League players will perform on the shop team. The junior plumbers have put in several snappy practice sessions already and are pronounced fit and ready.

Action starts at 7:15 tonight. First game: Lions vs. Firemen. Second game: Police vs W&J Shop.

OAKLAND CHAMPS PLAY THE PINE CONE AND WILDER AND JONES TOMORROW NIGHT

A doubleheader, featuring some of the best softball talent in the Bay Area, will be set before the Carmel softball fans tomorrow night. The Becovitch & Sons softballers, perennial Oakland champions, will cross bats with the W&J team at 7:30, and will come back against the Pine Cone at 8:45. The Oakland club boasts two of the best softball pitchers in California so a doubleheader will be right down their alley. Clyde Walker, sensational Plumber hurler, will toe the slab in the opening tilt and, if he turns in his usual game could give the Oakland champs an interesting evening. Rich Oyama and Ky Miyamoto will share the hurling chores for the Pine Cone.

Remember, first game 7:30. Another banner crowd should be on hand for this bargain bill.

RECORD CROWD SEES PINE CONE EDGE W&J, 1 TO 0

Over 1,000 softball fans jammed Sunset Field Tuesday night to see the Bay League softball clash between Wilder & Jones and the Pine Cone. When the dust of battle had cleared away, the scoreboard read: Pine Cone 1, W&J 0. The closeness of the score just about tells what a thriller these two local clubs put on for the fans. The Pine Cone dented the platter in the top of the first inning when Gordy Miyamoto got a life on an infield error, went to third on wild pitches, and scored on a passed ball. The Plumbers threatened to tie the score in the fourth, when Morey Viramontes connected for a thundering triple. Viramontes' blow could well have been a home run if Gene Ricketts, Pine Cone leftfielder hadn't made a spectacular recovery of the well-hit drive. However, Ky bore down in the pinch and struck out the following batter.

Another fielding gem by the same Ricketts robbed Manny DeMaria, W&J catcher, of a sure home run. The Plumber backstop hit one up against the school house but the alert councilman reached over an automobile to haul down the sure four-master. Duke Dufur, Pine Cone center-fielder, ran a country mile to haul in Jim Kelsey's double-labelled liner. The game was replete with thrills from opening pitch to the final putout.

Both hurlers, Miyamoto for the Pine Cone, and Walker for the Plumbers, turned in masterful jobs and the nod could well have gone to either of them. Walker sent 12 down via the K route, while Ky pushed the third strike past nine W&J hitters. Each allowed two hits, Viramontes and Orville Jones garnering the safeties for the losers, with Ricketts and Hefling connecting for the winners.

With this victory the Pine Cone moves into a tie with Wilder & Jones in the Bay League standings. The Castroville Dons still top the league, having a clean slate in four starts.

CARMEL GIRLS CONTINUE WINNING STREAK

Running their winning streak to two straight, the Carmel girls softball team put on a hitting show in the sixth inning of Tuesday night's game and defeated the Marina Merchanettes, 8 to 6. Jerry Yokum pitched brilliant ball in notching her second triumph of the season, and she was ably backed up by the terrific hitting of Carol Templeman. A crowd of over 600 fans was on hand to see the local lassies come through with flying colors. Nifty fielding plays by Carol Petty and Joan Saunders drew ohs and ahs from the male softball performers. A few more practice games and Bonnie's Beauties will be ready to tackle the clever teams from Salinas, King City, and Sunnyvale.

CRICKET CLUB DOINGS

The Del Monte Cricket Club was eliminated from the Thomas H. Price Cup competition, being defeated last Sunday at Carmel by the Olympic Club in the first round. The visitors batted first and scored a total of 198 runs; Harry Hughes was top scorer with 60. After tea the home team's batting broke down rather badly and made only 69 runs. John Tyler made 39 and Duncan Murray 23.

Next Sunday, June 26, Del Monte will entertain the Surrey Club of San Francisco at Carmel in a League fixture.

BIG INNING GIVES THE BOYS' CLUB VICTORY OVER NEW MONTEREY

For seven innings last Monday night's Kid League softball game between the Boys' Club of Carmel and New Monterey was a nip and tuck affair, but the Carmel lads found the range in the eighth frame and racked up a half dozen markers to gain a 10-4 victory. Carmel took a two run lead in the first inning when Bob Updike and Bill Daniels connected for a brace of blows. The visitors came right back in their half of the inning to knot the count at 2-2. Lawrence Segovia supplied the Monterey power by lashing out a well-hit double. The plate was moving around for Johnny DeAmaral in this inning and he gave out four Annie Oakleys. New Monterey picked up two more runs in the third heat as DeAmaral walked two batters and Sanchez drove them home with a single. Henry Overin tied the score in the sixth by driving out a roaring triple against the right field wall.

In the big eighth inning the Car-

Stephanie Shehatovich's Program

By Noel Sullivan

There are invariably drawbacks as well as compensations for the passing years, and the members of the Carmel Music Society should be grateful to the unbroken continuity of twenty-one seasons of that institution, which significant anniversary was celebrated in 1947 by the acquisition of a beautiful Steinway concert grand piano, described by more than one of the artists who has played on it as "the finest instrument in the country."

Following the annual meeting, which was held in the Sunset School auditorium last Friday evening, Stephanie Shehatovich played a program which included works of Bach, Gluck, Scarlatti, Schumann and Chopin, in addition to compositions by Scriabine and Villa-Lobos, and seldom has the above-mentioned piano (unfortunately silent during too much of its sojourn in Carmel) been heard to better advantage.

As far as this writer could judge, there were no two opinions among the audience as to the delight of this concert. At the piano Miss Shehatovich weaves a spell, and especially in the sustained lyric passages her tone was of an arresting beauty.

The Happy Spirit from Gluck's opera, Orpheus, was truly recreated in her superb playing of Sgambati's arrangement of this immortal melody. Suspended between heaven and earth, nostalgic for that other home, this gentle visitor from Elysian fields moved in our midst.

In some of his great piano works Robert Schumann has indicated a verse as a subtitle, and through this means he has communicated to his interpreters something of the vision that gave him inspiration. I could not but wonder, listening to the "musical paragraphs" of the "Kinderscene," as performed with deep feeling and insight by Stephanie Shehatovich, why he had not inscribed on the title page: "Unless you become as little children, you shall not enter the kingdom of heaven." Was it perhaps that he felt this would have been to obvious, since the music itself is an uninterrupted description of simplicity and innocence that can only be associated with the tenderest years of man's life? No "poet" is named by Schumann in the concluding passage, which he calls The Poet Speaks, but undoubtedly as a tribute to no less an artist than one of the Evangelists, the implications are adequate.

The Chopin group, which concluded this magnificent program, had strong biographical overtones, which were particularly appropriate for this year which commemorates the centennial of his death. The Polonaise seemed like a fervent statement of his faith. God and country held no small place in the heart of this great man. The Nocturne gave a glimps of his love life, with moments of serenity and bliss, rapidly engulfed in turbulent despair. And might not the Fantaisie be regarded as a musical commentary on his fleeting years? Everything is to be found in it; the dignity of man and the limitless aspiration of which he is capable. There is, however, more of irony than of resignation, and even the first bars suggest a "marche funebre," which he early recognized as inevitable destiny.

Recreation Program Activities

By GEORGE MOSOLF

Earnest Calley's ceramics class will not meet until July 5 as the popular shop instructor is taking a short vacation. The ceramics class will meet in room 19 at Sunset School, 7 p. m., Tuesday, July 5, and every Tuesday until August 23.

SONG AND STORY HOUR ON FRIDAY MORNING

The song and story fun session conducted by Evelyn Nidever Hildebrand will be held every Friday morning from 10 to 11:30 in the Sunset Cafeteria. Youngsters from 4 to 10 years of age are invited to partake in these sessions. Mothers may stay with their youngsters and participate in the festivities or leave them in competent hands and spend the morning shopping. As with the puppet show, children are encouraged to arrive before 10 o'clock, in order not to disturb the program after it has started.

TENNIS INSTRUCTION EACH TUESDAY AND THURSDAY

Sprouts wanting to learn the fundamentals of tennis are invited to join Ray Messinger's racquet classes which are held each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from 1 to 3 p. m. Boys and girls from 10 to 18 are eligible to take part in the tennis classes. There are a few racquets available at the high school courts for those who do not have their own racquet. Practice balls are furnished at the courts. There is still plenty of time after the tennis class to walk across the football field and grab a refreshing swim.

FOLK DANCING CLASSES ON MONDAY AND THURSDAY

Mrs. Hitchings would like to see more of the high school and college students on hand for the Monday and Thursday folk dancing sessions. Remember these lively gatherings are open to all ages from high school upward. Monday nights find the beginners and comparatively new hands swing through the maneuvers, while Thursday the experienced lads and lassies take over.

Plans Announced For Carmel And Valley Phone System

A meeting of the Public Utilities Commission has been set for June 27 at 10 o'clock in the Few Memorial Hall in Monterey to hear the application of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company for authority to place into effect the new schedule of rates which will be in effect when the dial service in Carmel and Carmel Valley is installed.

The new buildings, both in Carmel and the Valley, are virtually completed, and installation of equipment will begin in the near future. Tentative date for opening of the Valley exchange will be in October of this year, while it will be next February or March for Carmel.

Dials are being installed progressively for Valley residents but service will continue to be manual until the entire system is cutover, according to Robert Howard, local manager.

It is expected that the extended area service, which eliminates a toll between Carmel and Monterey and the Valley and Monterey will be placed into effect next month.

When equipment has been installed in the Carmel building, an open house will be held and visitors will be welcome to watch the new service in operation.

Lt. Col. Finley

Funeral services were held Tuesday at the Monterey Presidio Chapel for Lt. Col. James Bramblett Finley (U. S. A. Ret.), after he had taken his own life early Saturday morning. His body was found by his wife, Mrs. Posephine Finley, near his Monterey Peninsula Country Club home with a revolver nearby.

Col. Finley served overseas during both World Wars and was retired in 1942 because of ill health. A native of Annapolis, he was 54 years of age. He had lived in this community for six years.

Surviving are his wife and a brother, Maj. Gen. Thomas Finley of Colorado Springs.

Paul's Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Russ Bohlke Honored At Legion Meeting

Russ Bohlke, University of California football star who suffered a spinal injury last fall, was greeted by the Carmel American Legion at last Monday night's dinner meeting and was presented with a $575 bond by Commander-elect James M. Kelsey.

Bohlke is home for a week's visit from Van Nuys Hospital. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bohlke, were also present at the meeting.

Volume By The Late Jo Mora Is Published This Week

Californios, written and illustrated by the late Jo Mora, Pebble Beach artist, writer and sculptor, was published this week by Doubleday & Company, Inc. The volume is the saga of hard-riding vaqueros, America's first cowboys. Mr. Mora was also the author of Trail Dust and Saddle Leather, published two years ago.

One of the author's lifelong interests was the California vaquero, that hearty type of missionary-trained horseman, who tended the mission herds for 80 years before the Texas cowboys appeared on the national scene.

In Californios, Mr. Mora pays tribute to the daring and skill of these hard-riding cowhands, bringing to light much fascinating information about their methods and equipment, their evolution from wild Indians to finished cowboys. The volume is illustrated with 44 action drawings. Californios is a valuable contribution to the story of the Old West.

The Stolen Church . . .

commercial development required the Canadian Pacific Railway to make Revelstoke what Donald had been. Every facility was freely given to railway employees to remove not only their homes and household goods to Revelstoke, but even their Odd Fellows (Selkirk) Hall came over knocked down. The church was to have come also—St. Peters, Revelstoke, which had grown apace, requiring it as a chancel. But it didn't come! When the Synod of New Westminster heard of the wholesale removal of Donald to Revelstoke, it having then jurisdiction over the Kootenay's, and knowing Revelstoke's wants, presented Revelstoke with the Donald church, saying, in nicer words, "Go and get it." But when Revelstoke looked for it, it wasn't to be found. Finally it was located at Windermere, and for good churchmen, pretty sharp letters were written requiring the return of the church.

Windermere churchmen couldn't apparently read or write — or wouldn't. Then the Synod took a hand at writing, demanding at least, the return of the church to Donald. This too, was "filed" and after Dean Paget of Revelstoke had built St. Peter's its present chancel at his own expense, the whole matter was dropped and the thief forgiven. You will forgive him too, on hearing his story.

He was one Rufus Kimpton, a prosperous Donald merchant, a devoted admirer of Father Pat, and a zealous churchman. His wife was even more so. When the Donald demolition order came, Mr. Kimpton decided to move to Windermere, with which he had heavy business associations. As one by one the buildings were pulled down, the pioneer church was left alone in Donald to mark its departed glory. Together Mr. and Mrs. Kimpton tearfully looked at it, and with one thought both said "Where we go, thou goest." Asking leave of no one with ecclesiastical authority, and hating to go and leave it standing, Mr. Kimpton had it carefully pulled down and the railroad moved it to Golden. From there he had it moved by barge and steamer 100 miles up river to Windermere, where he was waiting to re-erect it.

While it waited at Golden for the special barge transportation, some respectable churchmen, Anglicans, came in the night, like Nicodemus, and stole the sweet-toned bell. When the "stolen" church arrived at Windermere, the baroness' bell was the only thing missing.

The theft was easily traced to Golden churchmen, and letters just as strong as those from Revelstoke to Windermere about the church were passed between Windermere and Golden about the bell.

Golden churchmen could, however, read and write and even knew a lot of psychology. They said as the bell had, in the first place been stolen by Windermere, it had no legal right to it, and further argument leading to the bigger matter at issue, it remained content with its church, and the twice-stolen bell still calls good Anglicans to prayer at Golden.

The register of that little Donald church, now at Windermere is a living record of the energy of dear Father Pat who duplicated on the Crow the great mission work he inaugurated on the C. P. R. Main Line in "construction" time. But his best monument is that little stolen church at Windermere, and its register of his earliest labors in British Columbia. It shows services held by him at, besides Donald, Golden, Field, Beaver, Revelstoke, Vernon, the Okanagan, the Boundary, Windermere, Canal Flat, and even Benners Ferry, Idaho.

Rufus Kimpton passed away at his home at Windermere on June 2, 1934, at the age of 74 years. It is rather a peculiar quirk of circumstances, or call it what you will, that he was buried from the church with which he had such an intimate connection while living.

Professions Asked To Co-Operate In Writers Conference

Mrs. Glenn Clairmonte will act as moderator while suggestions are exchanged for the establishing of this as an annual Carmel institution.

Charles Dawson, principal of the Adult School, is now accepting registration, and he requests the cooperation of all those who have had experience at writers' conferences in other parts of the country.

A Dantean Riddle Solved?

(In a recent issue The Pine Cone carried a notice of a monograph by Leonardo Olschki published by the California University Press in which the author offers a novel interpretation of a mooted passage in Dante's Divine Comedy. The Rev. A. R. Bandini, our local Dante scholar and translator, comments on this matter.)

BY A. R. BANDINI

This piece is especially for Dante addicts; other people would probably think this subject frivolous or anyway too esoteric. It concerns the interpretation of a mysterious line in the Divine Comedy in the course of a passage where the poet prophesizes the coming of a Deliverer who will bring about a new peaceful and just organization of human society.

Certain indications are given by which the expected Deliverer might be identified; the indications are vague and such identification has been a matter of controversy since the appearance of the Divine Comedy, shortly after 1300 A. D. The line in question reads in the original:

"E sua nazion sara' fra feltro

which may mean: "His nativity shall be between felt and felt." However the line may be translated in various other ways. The word "nation" instead of "nativity" or "origin" might mean "nation" in the ordinary English sense or "realm" or "domain". The two "feltros" if spelt with a capital F might be geographical terms and hint that the Deliverer would be someone born in, or ruling over, a certain territory in northern Italy bounded by two localities called Feltro. In fact, a certain Seigneur answering that requirement was greatly admired by Dante who placed great hopes in him. Again "feltro" may be the same thing as "filtro" (early filters were made of felt) and might refer to the heavens, in the Ptolemaic conception; the heavens acting as filters to the Divine influence and to the stars' influence. And, after all, the Dantean "feltro" may simply mean plain felt cloth.

Given a line susceptible of half a dozen so disparate—while all legitimate — meanings, no wonder we have there a riddle wrapped up in an enigma and the whole enveloped in mystery.

Without entering the labyrinth of possible and sometimes plansible interpretations, let us consider the latest one—rather surprising—offered by Leonardo Olschki (of the Florence Olschkis.) He connects "feltro", the cloth, with the Constellation of Gemini (Twins) for the very simple reason that the astronomical symbol of Gemini was represented, in antiquity and in the Middle Ages, by two felt caps. It may be fairly assumed that Dante knew this circumstance and since he was fond of astronomical or astrological references, it may also be conceded that by his cryptic line he merely wanted to say that his Deliverer would be born under the influence of the Gemini constellation, one for which he had the greatest respect since he, too, was born under it.

This is in a nutshell the suggestion emerging from the Olschki monograph, a very ingenious one and possessing some elements of plausibility.

But there are objections; first of all, a reference to the Twins' caps by mention of the cap's material seems a little bit too cryptic. The long arm of metonymy appears stretched somewhat too far. However, the poet wanted to be cryptic and he might have adopted a phrase well nigh unfathomable.

A more important point is this: why should the Dantean Deliverer of society be born under those particular auspices? Let us quote the two lines describing the Deliverer which precede the one in question:

He shall not feel on either earth or pelf
But upon wisdom, and on love and virtue.

Olschki claims that those spiritual qualities were astrologically—connected with the influence of the Heavenly Twins. That is opened to considerable doubt. Dante addresses the Twins: "O glorious stars . . . from which I acknowledge, All of my genius, whatsoe'er it be" and in general the medieval mind ascribed to the Twins' influence upon the artistic temperament rather than up social virtues. The old Dantean commentators speak of the Twins as patrons of the "science of writing," as givers of "subtility of mind"; the Deliverer would be more logically connected with the planet Jove (symbolized by the Eagle. In fact it is in the heaven of Jove that Dante meets the great and wise rulers of the world.

Admitting, for the sake of discussion, that the Deliverer is a person we may ask: was this person a contemporary of Dante? If so, to clinch the Olschki argument one out to be able to find among the possible contemporary candidates someone born under the Twins. In the absence of this obtainable corroboration, the suggestion lacks solid ground.

If the Deliverer was some undetermined person unknown to Dante, in fact a mere personification of the poet's yearnings and expectations, a consummation devoutly to be wished but naturally indefinite, why should the poet include a precise detail in such a vague design. There would be no more sense in a geographical limitation concerning the place of birth of an indetermined Deliverer then in a time limitation as to the day of his birth. I have already stated that the moral virtues predicated of thhe Deliverer have no necessary connection with his birth under the Twins.

Besides—but I admit this is a matter of literary taste—I feel that in the "feltro" line Dante meant to indicate a qualification of the Deliverer in addition to those expressed in the two previous lines. He has already said that pelf or land will not concern the expected personage—or whatever it is—also that he shall be imbued with wisdom, Love and virtue; stating that he will come under the Twins' influence because that means he would possess wisdom, love and virtue would be a mere repetition. I believe the line intends to convey a tertium quid which still escapes us. I have my own ideas on the subject but not yet fully elaborated—and probably no more valid than those of many other Dante students.

However, thanks are due to Mr. Olschki for his striking suggestion and also for his scholarly contribution to the history of felt, the uses of it among Tartars and Chinese and the symbolical values it had among them.

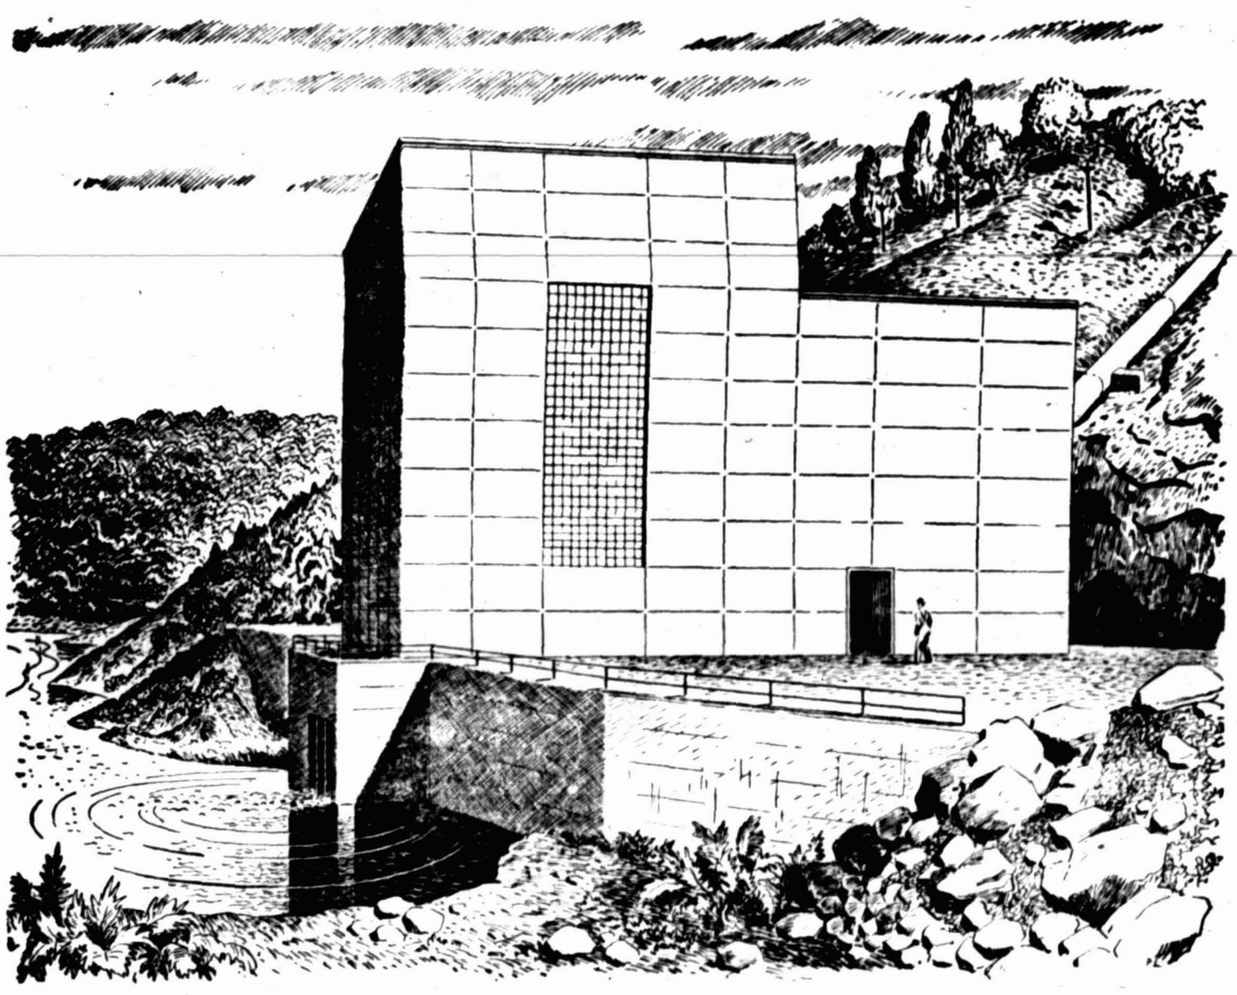
power-producer on the line



Colgate is fifth plant added to the system in thirteen months

There's new power pouring from the Yuba River today . . . 40,200 horsepower. A few days ago the tumbling Yuba waters began spinning the generators in P.G. and E.'s new Colgate plant built to replace the pioneer Colgate unit that first supplied Oakland with electricity half a century ago. Colgate is just one of the many powerhouses . . . completed or building . . . in P.G. and E.'s postwar expansion program, which is adding nearly two million horsepower in new generating capacity to our system. In the past thirteen months alone this program has paid big power dividends . . . a total of almost 600,000 horsepower from five new major plants. In addition to Colgate, they are:

Kern Steam Plant, near Bakersfield, began turning out 101,000 horsepower for California in May, 1948.

Electra Powerhouse, on the Mokelumne River, 133,000 horsepower, came on the line in July, 1948.

West Point Powerhouse, also on the Mokelumne, added another 21,000 horsepower in November, 1948.

Station "P," the steam giant by San Francisco Bay added 298,000 horsepower in February, 1949.

Work never stops on our power-building program

The Time Has Come . .

By Kippy Stuart

There are more crimes committed in the name of top soil than are committed in any other garden accessory. Most of the mistakes in selling top soil come from ignorance rather than from intent to defraud. A granite quarry, sticking right up from the side of a hill, would be top soil to some. Well, why not, the stuff is on top of the rest? I've seen so-called top soil that would make a good gardener shiver with anguish. Sticky clay, or hard pan adobe can rightly be called "the stuff on top" but . . . the stuff on top of what? Why, a a clay bank or an adobe bank, which is anathema to garden growth.

The most frequent mistake in buying top soil is to be guided by the color. That nice black sand that looks so fertile is nothing but death to growing plants. The Monterey Peninsula is host to all sorts and conditions of earth, from the deadliest blue clay and adobe to the deadliest loose, black sand. Of the three, the black sand is the most difficult. This sand packs like a vice and water will not penetrate, no matter how much you sprinkle. The stuff is just not wetable and plants struggle and die.

The answer to the question, "Can one reclaim this sandy soil?" is YES with big letters, but it takes time and work. Mulch in any form, will recondition black sand and make of it fertile arable land. The garden compost is the best source of mulch, and compost is economical also, as it can be obtained from the cuttings and rakings of your own garden.

The next best soil conditioner is cow manure. In my experience I have found that equal parts of cow manure and black sand will eventually make excellent garden soil. But this will not happen all at once. The fall is the best time to start making soil arable. Pile on the manure, and be sure to buy manure that is laced with straw. Let the garden alone for the rains to do the work, and come spring, all one has to do is turn the ground over a few times, and presto, you have soft, velvet soil.

For the select and small garden beds, there is nothing better for mulch than mushroom manure. Mushroom manure has lain in the dark mushroom caves for a long time and has been raised to a temperature sufficient to kill all weed seeds and other unwanted stuff. I go into raptures over mushroom manure and keep a small pile always at hand for my rare and best loved plants. This is the time of year to come to the help of lawns. Those spotty and ragged lawns can be reclaimed almost immediately with a dressing of ground mushroom manure. All one has to do is sprinkle the mushroom mulch on the lawn, be generous with water, and the first thing you know your ratty lawn is transformed into a soft, green carpet. It is always a good idea, when reclaiming lawns, to sprinkle grass seeds on the bare spots that are first dressed with mushroom mulch.

When you buy top soil, make the test yourself by squeezing a handful, then opening your hand. If it is soil with sufficient mulch to nurse a new garden along, the earth will pack slightly; if your handful falls away between your fingers, what you have is only black sand.

Thousands Attend Salinas Rodeo

Thousands of visitors jammed Salinas last week to attend the 33rd annual California rodeo and to participate in the other activities planned for the four-day celebration.

Although the rodeo is now a big-time event on a par with any other in the country, there were still plenty of local horsemen taking part in the track and arena events.

Joanne Phillips, 17 year old San Benita County girl was crowned as "sweetheart" of the rodeo at the opening day on Thursday by Lt. Gov. Goodwin Knight, and she rode in the place of honor at Saturday night's big Colmo del Rodeo parade.

Do You Remember . . . ?

THE ARTISTS' PARIS—1909

By A. G. Warshawsky

A flagrant example of this fictitious pricing of paintings came to light a short while ago. A picture by the Louanier Rousseau, The Sleeping Bohemian, had been sold at auction for half a million francs. The truth about this fake sale came out when Rousseau's heirs sued the owners. By French law the heirs of a painter are entitled to two per cent on every sale of his works. No matter how many times a painting is sold, the heirs can claim their two per cent. In this case it was proved in court that no bona fide sale had ever taken place and that the auction had been faked to boost the market value of the Douanier's work. The huge price paid for The Sleeping Bohemian would serve to send up the price not only of all the Douanier Rousseas in the dealers' possession, but also of works merely attributed to the Master, which were often of dubious authenticity.

This was the period when every denizen of Montparnasse appeared laden with canvases and paint-boxes. The production of pictures seemed the only important industry of this part of Paris. Painters and their easels were dotted all over the Luxembourg Gardens; as for the banks of the Seine, especially in the vicinity of the famous Pont Neuf (the New Bridge, which is the oldest in Paris!) a newcomer would have found difficulty in discovering a place to set his easel. There was an affluence of visitors at the art galleries on the Boulevards and near the Madeleine, and a steady crowd to be seen outside of all shop windows where paintings were on view.

These street groups often contained the shrewdest of critics who were undeterred by the prevailing fashion of the moment in formulating sane judgments. Sometimes I have been surprised by over-hearing really intelligent discussions among groups of day laborers regarding the various styles of painting exhibited in the windows—a proof that the Parisian, of whatever station, accepts art as one of the natural and essential activities of life, and not as a luxury for the wealthy and leisured classes, which is the conception of the average American citizen.

At the Louvre, Luxembourg, and other galleries, both public and private, I found all classes represented among the regular frequenters, including those too poor to possess even the humblest work of art. In France, and especially in Paris, the idea of the nude is not associated with morals and ethics. Public parks and gardens are peopled with graceful nude sculptures, and children habituated to seeing the human form thus represented in its natural state, accept it as a normal thing and, if they have a sense for art, as one of the forms of beauty — not something about which to blush and whisper. A storm like that raised in Boston some years ago regarding MacMonnies' Bacchante — that piquant and wholly decent work of art, now to be seen in the Luxembourg Gardens—would be neither understood nor tolerated in any continental country. It is only through the senseless addition of draperies, vine-leaves, by drawing attention to the veiled parts of the anatomy, the nude becomes vulgar and indecent. When Pierre Louys in Le Roi Pausole visualized a society where all beautiful, well-formed people go unclad and only the old and ugly wear clothing, he was stating in humorous terms profound moral, as well as aesthetic, truths.

Towards the end of July, 1909, with the weather warm and muggy, I worked a good deal out of doors, along the river banks and in the parks and gardens. My Italian experience in out-of-door sketching had given me confidence, and I was no longer made nervous by inquisitive passers-by stopping to examine my work. Yet wherever one went to sketch, there would be so many doing likewise, that it was difficult to feel really at ease. I began to long for the peace and seclusion of the country. My last instalment of money was not a large one and I wanted to make it last as long as possible. That was an added argument for going to the country where living was cheaper than in Paris. As Halpert was also anxious to do some larger and more serious sketches than those he had brought back from Italy, we began scouting round to find a suitable spot in which to work.

Vernon on the Seine and Giverney, a well-known artist colony, both on the confines of Normandy, were within a comparatively short distance from Paris. So early one morning, with the lightest of baggage, we took the train for St. Germain-en-Laye, from where we intended walking the thirty odd miles to Giverney. Keeping as much as possible to secluded country roads and river paths, picnicking by the way-side, we walked all afternoon, with occasional rests, until late that evening. The countryside was so beautiful, that we hardly felt the fatigue of our long tramp.

Soon after dawn we were again on our way, passing through quaint, delightful old villages and along picturesque roads, which in those pre-war days, were still unspoiled by motor traffic; for the few automobiles we met from time to time, could hardly be said to interfere with the pleasures of what the French call "the footing."

It was towards dusk when we came in sight of Vernon. Its old bridge, quaint buildings and tree-covered island, quickly convinced us that this was an ideal spot for a painter. Giverney was opposite and we decided to visit it next day.

Before entering Vernon, we had taken a deliciously cool swim in the Seine and shaken the dust off our clothing. Halpert's experience of country hotels had taught him that the most practical arrangement is to go to the best "auberge" in the town, where prices are no higher and accommodation and food are better than at the more inferior inns, to say nothing of the greater cleanliness.

Close to the river, on the main road leading from Paris to Rouen, was a charming hostelry, the Hotel du Soleil d'Or. One side was taken up by a picturesque cobbled courtyard, dating from the days of post-chaise and traveling coach; on the other side, facing a shady alley, was a sunny terrace with tables set out for dinner. It was altogether the ideal inn dreamed of by the hungry wayfarer, and needless to say, we "fell for it."

But my enthusiasm was tempered by apprehension as to the cost at this inviting hostelry. I noted that the price for dinner on the menu was two and a half francs (fifty cents), including wine and coffee, and I concluded that three meals a day and lodging would prove too great a strain for our slender purses. But Halpert assured me that pension rates per month would be much cheaper.

After the succulent and varied repast, we proceeded to interview the "patron" regarding a night's lodging, to begin with, and then inquire as to rates for a pralonged stay.

To my agreeable surprise, the "patron," who was also the chef, spoke a little English, having once been employed by a prominent London club. In the customary French manner, we were referred to his wife, a frail, blonde young woman, established at the case desk, to arrange about prices. We explained that we were artists and that we hoped to spend at least two months at Vernon, if satisfactory terms could be made. I was delighted and astonished to hear that for a hundred francs a month (then twenty odllars), we should be provided with lodging and full board, the meals to be of the same prodigality and excellence as the one we had enjoyed that evening, and to include a choice of wine, beer, or cider. Accepting these terms, we promised to return with our luggage and painting material in a few days. Madame Espagnon, the "patronne," graciously informed us that our dinner and room for that night would be referred to our "pension" bill and that we need not trouble to pay until we returned. Such proof of confidence served as the climax to our contentment.

JOSEPH

There was no questioning in Joseph's eyes,
No faltering of the hands that eased her cries;
Only quiet tenderness was there
To grace the ancient duties he must share.
No sign remained of narrow anguish spent
In the sobbing wind that rocked his lonely tent . . .
Perhaps he walked a distant road where he Could tramp in dust the flames of jealousy—
If so, within the stable dimly lit,
Such scorching fire had made him doubly fit,
Seeing through her tears how Mary smiled
Upon the guardian of her Holy Child.

HIBERNAL

In shattered ice and sparkling snow with long blue shadows underfoot, through woods wherein the silent go through green and brown and leaflessness;

in spume and spray and foggy air clogged with the suspirations of those who remain to stare and turn away in quietness;

in winter weather and the wild aquatic soughing of the trees, some with the candor of a child go where they will, do what they please;

and do not suffer, and move on;
and do not wonder, and are gone.

—David Derek Stacton,
2397 Folsom Street,
San Francisco 10, Calif.

SHORE DESIGN

Here the design — the ages — rocks glyphed with secret.
Under the feet, layer on layer, insect, bird, man.

How quiet the growing:
polished to shale and shifting sand: tone, color, atmosphere — the sea builds:
not one least shell, not one weed in wave,
but has known change.

Sea salt in the nostrils, sea chill in the veins, and even now from the feet, our stretched, our perpetual oneness shadowed on rock and rock . . .
O walking the uneven shore,
remember how sun gilded the gulls, and our morning figures?

In the color slide class George Herzenberg took first award; Dorothy Schmiedell, Edwin K. Aasen and Kenneth Harlan, honorable mention. Judge was Russel Cummings, distinguished exhibitor in the national salons and member of the Carmel Camera Club.

Aftermath

Creakings and groans heard outside the establishment of Wilder and Jones early this week can be ascribed to the enthusiasm with which various people joined in the festivities last Sunday, when Wilder and Jones gave a barbecue for employees, members of the softball team, husbands, wives and children, about 150 in all. Besides a feast of steak and all the trimmings, most of the gathering indulged in softball, swimming and some hilarious sack races at the Rancho Fiesta in Carmel Valley. While members of the softball team were in good trim, their competition harvested a fine crop of aches to take home after the day's fun.

More Graduates

Three Carmel students will receive diplomas from San Jose State College at the annual commencement exercises today.

One whose future seems assured is Duncan M. Kerr, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Macmillan Kerr, a graduate in the school of business administration and member of the honorary society in that field. The young war veteran, his wife and young baby, will be looking for a place to live in San Francisco after his graduation, for his outstanding college record has brought him an offer of special training in the retail merchandising field with a large San Francisco department store. If house hunting permits, the Duncan Kerrs plan a short vacation here with his family.

Eade Jordan, son of Mrs. Sylvia Meeter Jordan, will receive his A. B. in Spanish and plans graduate work in Portuguese at Stanford with an eye to foreign service. A June wedding is scheduled for Eade and Betty Sherman of San Jose.

Michal D. Overhulse (Dawn, who once wrote and did wood cuts for the Pine Cone) received her B. A. in English, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Overhulse of Carmel Valley. She is interested in writing and may do graduate work toward her master's degree.

Another of the Stofers' daughters, Mrs. James P. Smith, will move from Salinas soon to occupy the new house just across from her parents on San Antonio street.

The family newlyweds, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Scott Stephenson (Barbara Stofer), who were married on March 19, are currently visiting his father in Flint, Michigan. Republican Women

A meeting of the executive committee of the Monterey Peninsula Republican Women was held at the home of Mrs. Karl W. Hisgen, president, on the afternoon of June 16.

The precinct canvass, which has been in progress since January, is now complete, and the results are being tabulated to reveal what the voters of Carmel are thinking about their government. Mrs. Harry B. Gantt served as chairman of the precinct and block captains, and everyone who participated in the canvass was commended for the thorough and efficient manner in which the survey was conducted.

The organization will recess until fall, when it will resume efforts in the interest of the Republican party.

Mrs. Hisgen was granted a leave of absence of four months, during which time she expects to do considerable traveling through the 11th Congressional District and also outside the state.

Mrs. Harry B. Gantt, first vice president, and Mrs. Marshall Dean, second vice president, will be available during the summer and until Mrs. Hisgen resumes her duties in the fall.

Edward Gargiulo Engaged

In line with Big Week festivities, Roberta Ann Merrill of Salinas made a special event of the announcement of her engagement to Edward S. Gargiulo, Jr., of Carmel. Friends from near and far gathered to learn of the betrothal at a cocktail party on June 17 at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Merrill. Miniature redwood corrals, made by Mrs. Merrill, and bronze horses carried out the rodeo theme, and the news was revealed on tiny silver scrolls concealed in vari-colored wrappings which were passed to the guests.

The bride-elect, a graduate of Salinas Union High School, attended Hartnell College and graduated from Armstrong College in Berkeley last December. She is affiliated with Beta Sigma Delta sorority in Berkeley and is a former member of Gamma Nu sorority.

Her fiance is the son of Mrs. Henry Davis of Los Angeles and of Edward S. Gargiulo of Carmel. He is a graduate of Monterey Union High School and Hartnell College. During the war he served as a radar mechanic in China, Burma and India. At present he is employed as a produce broker in Salinas and the Imperial Valley.

The couple plans a fall wedding.

Trip For Hicks

Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Hicks were back this week after a tour which must be some sort of record for covering the greatest distance in the shortest time. The drive included scenic spots along the Redwood Highway, Crater Lake, Reno, Gold Lake, Yosemite—north, east, south and west, in fact almost any place they could think of.

The Hicks were back in time to celebrate their wedding anniversary on Thursday, starting with the Lions Club ladies' night and ending with a few quiet toasts.

Stamp Club Activities

The Monterey Peninsula Stamp Club met at Sunset School Monday evening, with Colonel John R. Wright presiding, and an exciting auction was conducted by Arch Gibson. A door prize donated by Junior Club member Terry Farrell was taken home by Mrs. Frances Goerley.

The Junior Stamp Club will adjourn for the summer, to meet again next on September 17.

The July 4 meeting of the Senior Club will be omitted, but the members will hold another auction meeting on July 18. Former members of the Peninsula Stamp Club, or anyone interested in philately, are cordially invited to attend and join.

Marriage Revealed

A reception for some 300 people was given on June 19 by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Willoughby at their Oakland home to announce the marriage of their daughter, Phila, to Donald B. Witherell of Carmel. The groom's mother, Mrs. Thelma E. Witherell, drove up to Oakland for the reception.

The newlyweds, both students at the University of California, have taken an apartment in Berkeley, and Donald will attend summer session there. Plans for the future await the couple's graduation from U. C.

The bride's father is vice president and general manager of Sunset magazine.

Good Turn

One vacation deserves another, at least that's the way Mrs. Fenton Grigsby sees it. She is spending a two week vacation in Napa to keep an eye on the home of her son, William Grigsby, while he and his family take a vacation.

Nothing better or more delicious for a Sunday dinner than chicken or turkey done to a golden brown and served piping hot right from the oven. And of course there's no place better to get the makin's for this kind of a meal than at MAC'S POULTRY SHOP. Here, in the fresh, clean atmosphere of the shop you can choose from such things as roasters, fryers, and broilers, or maybe you'd like a fresh hen turkey or tom turkey. New Hampshire fricassee, too, and always those fresh ranch eggs. Round up the family for a very special dinner this weekend, but first stop by MAC'S POULTRY SHOP. Location is San Carlos and Sixth streets, you know. Phone 1492-J.

Californians and especially Monterey Peninsulites are going to be mighty glad to know of a new book over at HOLMAN'S BOOK DEN. Written and illustrated by the late Jo Mora, it's called Californios, and is a volume dealing with the early California Spanish and Indian vaqueros. Californios interestingly presents matter on the cowboys and the California country, and of course there's no need to tell you of Jo Mora's clever drawings. Finished just three months before his death this volume is truly a California story—a grand book to own. It's to be had at HOLMAN'S BOOK DEN for only $3.75, so why not stop by soon to see the book and to browse a bit? Location is the main floor of Holman's Department Store in Pacific Grove.

Great news this week from the TURNABOUT SHOP! A wonderful shipment of clothing direct from Hollywood has arrived, with many excellent quality and style buys. Home and Away Elizabeth Klein, on her return from Mills College last week, brought as a house guest for the week a classmate, Miss Ann Mayhew of Los Angeles. At the annual May Festival at the college, Miss Mayhew was chosen as freshman attendant to the May Queen.

Elizabeth, or Ginger as she is usually called, again made the Dean's List and has been awarded a Mills College scholarship for the coming year. She left last Sunday for Red Cross aquatic school for special training. On her return, she will make the daily trek from her Valley home to serve, with Joan Carr and Rod Dewar, as a life guard and instructor at the new high school swimming pool.

Summer Migrations

While Carmelites are flying in all directions, almost every day sees the arrival of summer residents to open their homes here. Mrs. Frank Moore, who divides her time between Pasadena and Carmel, was in town last week to ready her house for occupation when she returns around the first of next month.

Mr. and Mrs. Euclid W. McBride of Greenwich, Connecticut, are here to spend some time in their home on Carmel Point. They have recently returned from a European trip.

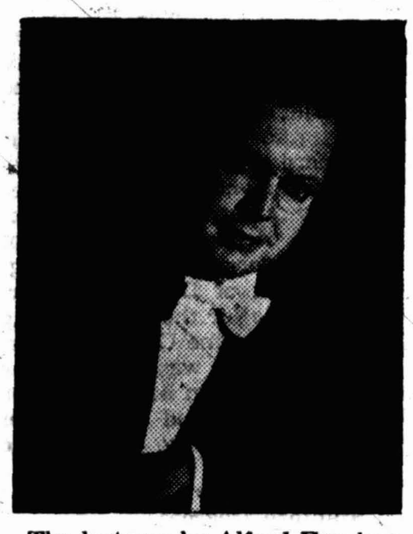
On the other hand, the E. W. Cochranes are on their annual fishing trip in Idaho and Canada, planning to return around August 1. With them are Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Robinson of Decatur, Illinois, who will make their home in Carmel after the trip.

Margaretta Park is visiting her mother, Mrs. Helen Clark Park, and the two of them plan a leisurely motor trip east later this month to visit Charles Edward Park and his family in Mount Vernon, New York.

Bonnie and Lee Gottfried are back from an extended trip through Idaho and Oregon.

Bertram Bordewick, who has been studying at the Carmel Art Institute, has departed for his home in Buhl, Idaho, to spend the summer there. He will return in the fall to continue his studies here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Fehring and their three daughters are off for a two week's vacation in the Northwest. Mr. Fehring's brother, "Dutch" Fehring, who is now assistant football coach at Stanford, and his family are occupying the house in the interim.



The lectures by Alfred Frankenstein during the Bach Festival Week, July 18 to 24, will be held in the new Carmel Woman's Club, according to announcement just made by the Denny-Watrous management, which has completed arrangements with Mrs. Annie Vaughan, president, for use of the building.

Mr. Frankenstein will lecture on the Bach programs on Friday and Saturday mornings at 11:00 o'clock. These lectures, one of the original features of the Bach Festival, were discontinued during Mr. Frankenstein's two years in the east, where, under the Guggenheim Award, he was carrying on research. Alfred Frankenstein, music critic for the San Francisco Chronicle, is regarded as one of the major critics and musicologists of the country.

The Festival box office in the Morehouse Realty on Ocean and Lincoln reports a heavier sale of season tickets than ever before, the advance mail orders from out-of-town points coming in by the dozens.

Gastone Usigli, conductor of the Bach Festival, is holding weekly rehearsals of the Festival Chorus, while section rehearsals are going on under Angie Machado at various hours. Mrs. W. B. Williams is giving many rehearsals of the alto section in her home in Hatton Fields. Ralph Linsley in Pasadena is recruiting the "extras" who augment the local sections, and Mr. Usigli will shortly fly to Los Angeles to give them an audition.

Mrs. Witherell Back

Mrs. Thelma E. Witherell recently returned from a trip east, bringing with her a new car in which she traveled 4,280 miles. Her tour included the Bad Lands, Black Hills and Mount Rushmore in South Dakota, a complete circle of Yellowstone Park, through Washington to Reedsport, then inland to see Mount Shasta and Redding, back to the coast and Eureka and thence down the Redwood highway, where all the wild rhododendrons were in full bloom.

Upon her return she greeted her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Smith, and their son, who came up from Pasadena to spend a week with her. While here they all drove up to Atlas Peak ranch near Napa to say goodbye to Mrs. Witherell's sister, who is leaving this week for London.

Parks-Wintemute Wedding

Lydia Anne Parks and Norman Stewart Mintemute were united in marriage last Saturday in a beautiful afternoon ceremony at the Church of the Wayfarer. Professor George Sutton Parks of Stanford University gave his daughter's hand in marriage for the service which was performed by Dr. K. Fillmore Gray.

The bride made a lovely picture in her gown of white cotton, starched lace and organdy, carrying an old-fashioned bouquet of pale pink roses and orange blossoms and wearing a matching spray in her hair. Dorothy Soares, flower girl, wore a dress of pale pink organdy and carried an old fashioned nosegay.

Mr. and Mrs. Hal Boyd, aunt and uncle of the bride, held an informal reception at their Carmel Highlands home. In addition to the other guests, relatives of the bride and groom present were the bride's parents; Mrs. Alexander Scott Ireland, her grandmother; Sutton Parks, her brother; Miss Grace Parks, her aunt; the groom's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brock; his aunt, Miss Patricia Mintemute; and his cousin, Miss Marlene Becar.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Royal Sexsmith Wintemute of Sidney, Australia.

Following a wedding trip to Fallen Leaf Lodge in the Sierra, the newlyweds will make their home in Palo Alto, where they will continue their studies at Stanford University. Mr. Wintemute is a graduate law student, and his bride a senior at the University.

The former Miss Parks is a graduate of Palo Alto high school and attended Mills College before enrolling at Stanford.

Garden Club

Mrs. Marcia DeVoe of Sunset School showed her skill as a color photographer when she presented a program of slides to the Monterey Peninsula Garden Club last Friday night.

Although she has been working with color only two years, Mrs. DeVoe is already an experienced artist in this medium. She has amassed a collection of about 2,000 color slides, many of which she uses in teaching kindergarten.

The first group of slides, with an accompanying recording of Mrs. DeVoe's script telling some of the history and pointing out the charms of Monterey Peninsula, showed scenes which included the 1946 flag-raising Centennial and the Portola Trek. Mrs. DeVoe prefaced her program by saying that all too often we take our matchless surrounding here on the Monterey Peninsula too much for granted, and that she hoped her slides would help us to remember how beautiful is our "circle of enchantment."

The second group of slides was entirely flower pictures — wild flowers and garden flowers—in all their natural beauty.

Krisnamurti at Ojai

Indian philosopher Krisnamurti, who has recently returned from India, will give a series of talks at the Oak Grove, Ojai, on Saturday afternoons and Sunday mornings, beginning July 16 and continuing through August. This will be the only series of talks in this country, as Mr. Krisnamurti plans to go to Europe early in September and from there to India in November.

Mrs. Johnson's Houseguest

Mrs. Frances Cottle Johnson returned Monday from a weekend trip to Southern California, bringing her sister, Mrs. Jack Stratton of Compton, who plans a brief stay in Carmel before going on to visit her brother's family in Gilroy. On Saturday Mrs. Johnson will entertain at a tea for her sister.

Mrs. Johnson's son, Warren, is spending his summer vacation from the University of Santa Clara in Quincy, Plumas County, where he and Mike Dills are working with the County Surveyor there.

Charles Childers Back

Tuesday night's ball game between Wilder and Jones and the Pine Cone served as the occasion for a rousing welcome-back to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Childers, who recently returned from a trip of several months across the country. The Childers were in Florida, up the East Coast, into Canada and made a leisurely journey back across the country. While in Washington, D. C., they visited the U. S. Senate in session, finding only 15 Senators holding a rather lethargic session (Charlie says he didn't get the impression that they were "earning their keep.")

When they returned to Seaside, where they now live, they found the tenants had planted a fine crop of corn in the back yard, an excellent dividend on their trip.

Youth Fellowship Program

New officers for the summer program of Youth Fellowship of the Church of the Wayfarer were chosen last Sunday evening by a group in a business session following their chapel worship service.

Lieutenant Lee Walker, Hugo Bedau, Julia Graves and Jan Mastin were selected as a program committee and have announced the Sunday evening sessions for the month of July. These will begin Sunday evening with a discussion led by Lt. Walker on Communism Inside the U. S. A. The social committee is composed of Barbara Teschke, Jackie and Carroll Briggs, and they have made plans for a beach party at the close of Sunday's discussion, which will also be held on the beach at the foot of Thirteenth Avenue. Marlene Becar was named secretary-treasurer of the group.

For Sunday's meeting, high school and college-age youth are asked to meet at the church at 6:30 p. m. to go to the beach for the discussion meeting at 7:00 p. m., to be followed by the social time.

Wayfarer Guest

The Reverend George Harper of Nashville, Tennessee, will be the guest preacher at the Church of the Wayfarer on Sunday, at both the 9:30 and 11 a. m. services, which will be conducted by Dr. K. Fillmore Gray.

Mr. Harper, who is editor of the interdenominational quarterly magazine of devotions, Power, and of the news magazine, Concern, is currently speaking and teaching in California. While in Carmel he and his wife and their small son have been visiting Miss Etta Paul. Mr. Harper is well known nationally for his outstanding work as a speaker, writer and worker with youth and the churches.

Lela Mann Here

Lela Mann has been in town to renew friendships for the first time in three years. She is the wife of Colonel William Mann who was Judge Advocate at Ft. Ord during the war and who was subsequently on duty in Paris. Lela was able to describe her travels in Switzerland, Italy and France, and to comment on the many changes which have taken place in Carmel since she made her home here. She and Colonel Mann are now residing in South Pasadena.

Random Shots

Betty Horst claims that the goodness of her friends will be her undoing. She recently mislaid some spare pounds in a visit to the hospital, returned home in glee only to be bombarded with rich and irresistible dishes by well-wishers.

Sam Colburn spent a week in Virginia City recently for a change of scenery for his water colors. While there he stayed at the Eric Kramers' wonderful old brick brewery, converted to an elegant home.

Bill Short has his English degree from the University of California and plans graduate studies in the school of education.

Marjorie and Frank Lloyd are having a small spree in San Francisco after making final arrangements for daughter Jennefer to enroll at Stanford.

If you enjoy hysterical entertainment, we recommend any catalogue of sound-effects recordings (Bill Fort and Dan Totheroh will back up our testimonial.)

John Nesbitt, his voice, and Mrs. Nesbitt were in town recently; also the Red Skeltons. With Phil Nesbitt, Mrs. Elizabeth Nesbitt, the "boys'" mother, the two couples had a fine time at the Abel Warshawskys last Thursday night.

Friends of Jaime D'Angulo will be glad to know that his health is much improved; he is, in fact, making broadcasts of a special nature to students, telling stories of American Indian folklore. These are made in Berkeley, where he now lives, but we were unable to ascertain over what radio facilities.

John Upton is teaching Spanish to Americans, and English to Mexicans, and writing articles on his own; he's officially a member of the extension division of the University of Guadalajara, and expects to remain in Ajipic indefinitely.

While on the subject of semi-expatriates in Mexico, we report that Zoe Kernick is out of the hospital in Guadalajara and is recuperating from typhoid and malaria at a rest hotel in Chapala.

Dr. Eric Berne, back from attending conventions in Montreal and a visit to New York, reports that New York seemed bigger, dirtier, noisier, and more crowded than ever.

More things we can't imagine: Sara Farrar with Colonel Glazebrook's voice, or vice-versa; Miss Elizabeth Niles shouting at the top of her voice; Roy Fraties without a smile, in spite of stern missions; Jane Filing and Helen Sears not speaking; Carmel's grocery clerks not eating a bit of the fruit they're arranging early in the mornings; Hildreth Hare without a fabulous pair of sun glasses; Ellen Leeds' pink-and-white looks taking on a mahogany tan; Kandinsky's work being exhibited at the Art Gallery; Tilly Polak without a snood taming her abundant hair; Louis Gribben without a ready retort to any remark.

With nostalgia we note the issuance of the late Jo Mora's last book, Californios, written and illustrated by him shortly before his death.

Sport Notes

mel Boys' Club really came to life. Joe Beard started the rally with a line drive single into leftfield. Overin waited out a walk and Bill Daniels scored them both with a well-hit single. Neils Reimers hit a line drive out of the park for a home run and Steve Whitaker followed with a triple. Stu Emery got a life on the third baseman's error and trotted home on DeAmaral's single. When the dust had settled, the CBC had dented the platter six times to take a 10-4 lead.

Music And The Other Arts

Editor's Note: When this series of lectures was delivered in Baltimore, explanatory passages on the piano were played to illustrate the various points that David Alberto wished to bring out. In order to understand more fully these articles, readers are asked to imagine the passages played at the places the author has indicated.

BY DAVID ALBERTO

We may even continue to divide the half of this phrase into parts which have titles—but let us return to the fact that these eight measures constiute a complete musical form and not a Study as we generally suppose, though usually constituted of eight measure periods is basically constituted of a figure or design composed of a certain number of notes repeated over and over with various chords as basis. The term Sequence designating this method of phrase construction fortunately is self-explanatory.

(Play a few measures of any Etude.)

It may appear somewhat illogical at this moment to find that in considering a Bach Fugue before concerning ourselves with the present matter we have dealt with the Polyphonic style, or that order where more than one voice is heard simultaneously, before occupying ourselves with the Homophonic, or that order where but a single melody appears. In explanation, it should be said that it was deemed wisest to proceed chronologically with the various subjects. Furthermore, as starting point, we began with the period when instrumental music first freed itself from the earlier period during which the human voice and its limitations fixed the aesthetic and theoretical standards whereupon the art was based. All must obviously realize that music of a single melody preceded Polyphonic music and that even before this rhythm, performed upon instruments of percussion, served to stimulate the souls of men.

Some years ago having completed an article on the origin and evolution of music, I learned of a work, just published, on the same subject written by Havelock Ellis. Both Mr. Ellis and myself traced the origin of music to the heart beat. An interesting observation probably somewhat relevant to this theory is the fact that previous to the introduction of the metronome, which was invented during Beethoven's life, tempo marks were indicated based upon the tempo of the heart beat. Such indications as faster, slower, and much faster actually meant faster or slower than the tempo of the normal heart beat. Although the human heart still served as basis for metronomic markings, it was quite some time after the introduction of this heart-beat-music that Johann Sebastian Bach came into this world, which entire period is being neglected. Thus it is that the Homophonic Period occupiest his position.

Returning for a moment to consider some other factors concerning the phrase, we often find one or more measures added. Brahms, more frequently than Beethoven, added or, in technical terminology, extended the phrase; in fact his masterful use of this device was among his principal resources.

Glancing through a technical book dealing with this subject, we find a great deal of attention and importance attached to what is termed the Cadence or method of ending the phrase. We find the terms Authentic Cadence, Plagal Cadence, Half and Deceptive Cadences, etc., which concerns the degrees of the scale upon which the last two, three or even four chords are constructed which, in turn, distinguish one type of cadence from another.

These four measures:
contain two cadences, the first a Half Cadence found in measure two consisting of Tonic then Dominant chord and which tends to leave us in suspense. The second, measure four consists of these same chords but reversed and satisfies us with a sensation of completion and finality.

Since the final chord is the one by which the key is distinguished we may readily recognize how this key-chord, especially when the keynote conspiculously appears as highest and lowest tones, serves to mark so definitely in music the place where in writing the period is placed. Thus the Cadence may be understood as comparable to the last words of a phrase, clause, sentence or paragraph.

Having distinguished the means whereby we are enabled to recognize the manner in which the divisions of music are understood, we are prepared to pass on with the object in mind to observe how these divisions are placed in juxtaposition, the compound of which constitutes one form or another—how the parts of the stentence are arranged to form the whole, how the several sentences are combined into the paragraph, and how a group of paragraphs becomes a movement which we may compare with a chapter in literature, the chapters eventually becoming a Sonata, which, in the case of Beethoven, at least we will compare with an Epic whereas with the romantic and neurotic Chopin let us rather offer the distinction of comparing his Sonatas with novels—with very excellent novels, however.

We might now glance at a Sonata as the musician likes to imagine himself capable of seeing—that is to behold a composition as though it were a solidified object capable of being seen in its entirety simultaneously as we behold a panoramic view.

This imaginary ability of the musician through which—dare I say?—he actually does behold the composition is most revealing, for it serves the layman to mark the great gulf existing between the average listener and the great creative musician. But it also serves the layman as a goal toward which he may strive, hoping that through serious application he eventually will attain — possibly has attained — to that elevation where the realm of sound lies stretched before him with all the colors of the spectrum present and so nicely arranged and proportioned that the ensemble sings to the eye as a painting of Gauguin or Delacroix sings in the musicians ear.

We will glance at a Sonata, dismember it and then dissect the parts until we arrive back again at the period, at the phrases of which the period is constituted—finally dissecting even it.

As we know a Sonata usually consists of three or more movements though fewer or more are not infrequently contained. These movements vary in form, most often including ore or more movements in Sonata-allegro form, a Rondo a Variation form or both. A Minuet which is but the rhythmic term describing another minor form may also be included. Probably it is best for the moment to regard a Sonata as being composed of a plurality of movements of varying or similar nature.

The Beethoven Sonata, Opus 37, frequently called "The Appassionata" is constituted of a Sonata-allegro following by a Variation form then another Sonata-allegro. The New World Symphony of Dvorak also contains Sonata-allegro movements first and last as do a great proportion of Sonatas.

Carmel Girl Wins Monterey Elks' $250 Scholarship

On Tuesday evening, the Monterey Peninsula Elks Lodge awarded its first scholarship to Laurel Del Hildebrand, the presentation being made by Exalted Ruler Harold Harper. Laurel, who was chosen unanimously by the scholarship committee headed by Roger Mathews, was one of three contenders for the $250 award, which is the largest single award to be made on the Peninsula.

A graduate of this year's class at Carmel High School, Laurel has also won the Gold C Award, one of the two superintendent's awards for outstanding achievement in scholarship, service and athletics. During her career at Carmel High, she won her Block C and three additional stars in athletics, was a member of GAA, served as president of the Leaders Club, president of the Girls' League, secretary-treasurer of the senior class and of CSF, and as business manager of El Padre, the annual. In 1948, she was chosen as representative of the Carmel Junior Red Cross to the national convention.

Laurel plans to work toward an elementary music teacher's certificate and will probably attend San Jose State before going to the Collegt of the Pacific for further music study.

"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come buy wine and milk without money and without price" (Isaiah 55:1). This is the Golden Text of the Christian Science Lesson-Sermon for Sunday, June 26. The subject of the sermon is "Christian Science."

The following citations are included in the sermon:

The Bible: "And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath day; that they might find an accusation again him. Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing; Is it lawful on the sabbath days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it? And looking round about upon them all, he said unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other" (Luke 6: 7, 9, 10).

"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "You can prove for yourself, dear reader, the Science of healing, and so ascertain if the author has given you the correct interpretation of Scripture" (p. 547).

Our Poetry Contest Winners Announced

have been improved. The general impression gained by the judges was a lack of work and in a great many cases, lack of anything to say. The bulk of the work was just fair, neither very good nor very bad.

The winning poems will speak for themselves. They were certainly the best of the final sifting. The first prize of $25 goes to Thirza Martin of Pasadena for the poem called Joseph, the second prize of $10 to David Derek Stacton of San Francisco for Hibernal, and the third prize of $5 to Gertrude May Lutz of San Francisco for Shore Design. Honorable mention is given to Betty Haskell House of Long Beach for Limbo in Los Angeles, and to Nancy Brown, age 16, of Carmel, for The Winter Has Come.—Dora Hagemeyer.

Population Up By Two

John Russell is the name chosen by Mr. and Mrs. William J. Zimmerman for their second boy, who was born at the Peninsula Community Hospital on June 16. His maternal grandfather, Rudy Ohms, is well known here; his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Jeannette Zimmerman, makes her home in New York City. The new baby's brother is Walter, age three.

And on June 19, a baby girl was born to Dr. and Mrs. Walter Layton at the Peninsula Community Hospital. She has been named Carolyn Vale.

Summer Arrivals

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Durrell have arrived from Pasadena for their annual summer visit to Carmel, having taken the house of Dr. Ferdinand Haasis for the months of June, July and August. Dr. and Mrs. Haasis have again taken up their duties as state fire-watchers at the lookout tower on Pinion Peak for the summer.

In September Mr. and Mrs. W. Egbert Schenck of 29 Palms will occupy the Haasis house on Torres street. Both the Durrells and the Schencks are enthusiastic Audubon Society members.

A recent issue of Desert Magazine states that to explore the Joshua Tree National Monument and help catalog botanical data, a trip to the southeastern part of the Monument was made recently by Mr. and Mrs. Schenck, Monument Superintendent Frank Givens and Dr. and Mrs. Phillip A. Munz (he is director of the Santa Ana Botanical Gardens.) The data will be used in future interpreting programs of the Monument and in scientific students in educational institutions.

Award for Bob Jensen

Robert Jensen, son of Mrs. Roxie Jensen, has been awarded a tuition scholarship at the Music Academy of the West in Santa Barbara following a voice audition in San Francisco. Bob, who graduated from Hartnell College in Salinas this spring, will enroll on July 1 to pursue his music studies, including voice training under Richard Bonelli.

NEED TAKES NO HOLIDAY

Blood donors for the monthly visit of the mobile unit, Monday, June 27, are most urgently needed, states Paul Whitman, chairman of the blood program for the Carmel chapter. Because of summer vacations there are only a handful of donors signed up for this month. Yet with summer vacations, especially the approaching Fourth of July weekend, and the inevitable increase in accident and burn cases, the demand for blood will be even greater.

Call the Carmel Red Cross, 382, for an appointment.

part of hundreds of local residents helped fill petitions with names of those protesting, and as the hour of Monday's meeting approached, councilmen found the meters had turned into smoking-hot potatoes.

"After the vote to kill, Benito Valde, Taos county state representative, made a speech in which he said Taos should be kept 'forever free.' He said that he and his neighbors in Penasco, 'all good Taosenos,' would gladly help with county-seat expenses if Taos residents couldn't raise the money themselves. He said he 'never wanted to see meters in Taos.'

"Mrs. John Young-Hunter, representing non-voting suburbanites, said she would like to see the present 1-hour parking ordinance 'strictly enforced.' In reply to a question by the mayor, she said she would 'gladly' pay a fine if arrested for overtime parking while shopping in Taos.

"Victor Higgins thought the parking problem could be eased somewhat if lines were painted on streets indicating the exact amount of space a car should occupy.

"Mayor Martinez said the town was so 'broke' it couldn't even buy paint, whereupon Mrs. Bill James rose to say she would donate a gallon of paint and that labor might come from the police force.

"Juan Sanchez, assistant district attorney, congratulated councilmen on their decision to follow the wishes of the majority. He said the parking meter, 'like prohibition,' could 'never work in Taos.'

"Floyd Santistevan declared that a close check of sales- tax returns would soon be made and this information used in assessing merchants their proper share of occupational taxes.

"This revenue, it was said, might be sufficient to meet current expenses.

"A floor suggestion that an additional half cent a gallon be added to village gasoline taxes gained slight encouragement."
